

Although not making any detailed suggestions, I do believe that the statistics do not correctly reflect the change in cost to the average household. The fact that Centrelink use a different index on pensions does indicate that the CPI is not producing valid result.

The food index does not reflect the rises in average household food bills.

Peter