

Dear Director,

The housing bubble has had a major consequence on the family life of all young Australians. The massive increase in house prices over the last 12 years has robbed from the future to give to the already wealthy house owners and investors.

The housing bubble has been seriously ignored by the cpi figures. I realize it is self feeding, but there is a need to add these increases (prices or rent) to try and deflate or stabilize this unproductive bubble.

Thank you for taking my view into consideration.

Yours sincerely

Annette Gibson
